European kitchens tend to be smaller than American models, which may explain the emphasis of Alno, the new retail tenant at the Brannan condominiums in San Francisco's South Beach neighborhood.

The German company customizes its kitchen with modules at different heights and contrasts its sleek external designs with elaborate organizational innovations on the inside.

There are more than 200 door styles and 1,700 finishes, all made with nontoxic paints and lacquers at a zero-waste factory. Go to www.alnousa.com to see more.
